Lyons charged Friday

By CAROLE LANGE

WAVELAND — A 22-calibre pistol used to kill a 15-year-old youth here Tuesday in a burglary attempt ironically was linked with the youth in an earlier burglary last October, police say.

Waveland investigating officer Terry Holmes said Thursday that the gun used to shoot 15-year-old Clifton Gillum during a burglary attempt at the home of Frank G. Lyons, Third St., Tuesday afternoon was the same gun stolen from Lyons' house last October by Gillum. That gun was later returned to Lyons after Gillum was arrested and charged with burglary.

Lyons, 78, was charged with manslaughter Friday and released on $2,000 bond following his admission that he shot the youth after unexpectedly finding him in his home.

Police said Lyons, a self-employed taxi driver, told them he returned home from work about 2:15 p.m. Tuesday afternoon, heard a noise in the house and found young Gillum straddling a window in the west front bedroom. Lyons then allegedly shot the youth once in the abdomen. Police refused to say Friday whether Lyons' gun had been fired more than once.

Holmes said police received a call from Lyons at 2:25 p.m. reporting a burglar inside his house who ran away when surprised. However, they were not told of the shooting at that time, Holmes said.

Police, he said, began a search of the neighborhood for a black youth dressed in blue small-checked pants, an orange, green and black knit cap, and khaki shirt.

The body of the youth was found across the street from Lyons' home by Officer Robert Tartavouille at 2:30 p.m.

Lyons identified Gillum as the burglary suspect, then admitted to officers that he had shot the youth.

In a weird twist of fate it was discovered the gun was the same one which Gillum had stolen from Lyons' home, along with $12 and a second revolver, during a burglary last October. Holmes said at the time of his death, Gillum was on probation for that burglary and one at Sordini's Grocery, Sears Ave., Waveland, which also occurred in October.

CLIFTON GILLUM

Attempts by Mobile Medic Ambulance personnel to restore the youth's vital signs were partially successful, but Gillum died later at Hancock General Hospital from internal bleeding.

The official cause of death was listed as a gunshot wound in the abdomen which severed the aorta. A hospital spokesman said the bullet which lodged in Gillum's back had to be removed by a Gulfport pathologist.

Police are now searching for a second suspect linked with the burglary attempt. "When we find that suspect,"

Holmes said "I think we'll also find the cutting tool used to remove the window pane and the instrument used to pry the screen off the bedroom window."

Gillum's step-father told the Echo Thursday that his step-son was a "good boy, who never gave me any trouble."

The youth was a student at Bay Junior High School, but was home the day of the shooting. His sister said he was supposedly on his way to the post office on an errand for his mother when the incident occurred.

Lyons will appear before City Judge Lucien Gex for a preliminary hearing next week.

If found guilty of manslaughter as a felony, the maximum penalty is 20 years in prison. However, if the case is determined a misdemeanor, the penalty for a guilty verdict could be as little as a $500 fine and one year to serve in the county jail.

Services for the youth will begin Monday, March 29, at 8 p.m. with a wake at First Kiln Baptist Church. The funeral will be held Tuesday at 2 p.m. at the church followed by burial in Kiln Cemetery.

Gillum, born June 20, 1969, is survived by his mother and step-father, Mr. and Mrs. Eddie White; one brother, Elijah White; and one sister, Mary Alice White, all of 425 Dixie St., Waveland.

Vehicle strikes sheriff's car

Hancock Sheriff's Deputy Lathan Garriga was slightly injured early Friday when his patrol car was hit by an oncoming car while parked on Interstate-10 at the Mississippi-Louisiana state line.

Sheriff Sylvan Ladner said Garriga's car was parked facing east in the west bound lane of I-10 where the deputy was investigating an accident.

He said the second accident, involving Garriga, occurred at approximately 6:30 a.m. when a car driven by Bob Kidwell of Carrieville, Texas, hit the front end of the deputy's vehicle.

A spokesman at the St. Tammany Parish Sheriff's Department said no charges were filed against Kidwell. Damage to both cars was approximately $500, Ladner said.

Cloudy skies fail to dampen Pass pilgrimage

BY MIKE FLYNN

Wet and windy weather Thursday dampened the festiveness of the Pass Christian spring pilgrimage, but many visitors refused to be defeated by the intermittent rains.

Registration was conducted at the VFW Post by members of Ladies Auxiliary of Post No. 5931. The ladies presented roses to the registrants and wore antebellum style dresses as they served refreshments to the guests.

Many of the visitors to the pilgrimage also enjoyed wearing period clothing as they toured historic homes and landmarks in the Pass Christian area.

The homes featured in the tour included the summer cottage of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Gildersleeve, at 1001 E. Beach Blvd., once the headquarters of the L&N Railroad.

Another beachfront home on the tour was the oak shaded home of Mr. and Mrs. George S. Frierson at 1024 West Beach. The property includes a beautifully landscaped garden with two ponds. The main house was built in 1895 while the West Cottage was constructed before 1935.

Built in the Old Pass Christian style of architecture, the newer home of Dr. and Mrs. George Byrne on Beach Hurst was featured in the afternoon.

Tea was served in the early evening from 4 p.m. until 6 p.m. at "Wild Life Manor", the home of Dr. and Mrs. C.D. Taylor. This spacious home was moved from its original beachfront location to its present site on East Second Street in

Cemetery, Trinity Episcopal Church, Saint Paul's Catholic Church, the Pass Christian War Memorial Park and the new fishing pier which includes the Chamber of Commerce building. The Wild Flower Garden maintained by the Pass Christian Garden Club on Jones Rd. and the Red Camellia Bush at 861 E. Scenic Dr. were of special interest to Garden Club members. The Wild Flower Garden has been maintained by the club for 25 years while the Red Camellia Bush is registered with the National Historical Society.

Frankiewicz cited by Planning Officials

Victor Frankiewicz, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Victor Frankiewicz of 403 Felicity Street, Bay St. Louis, was one of seven undergraduate and graduate students from the Department of Urban Studies and Planning at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology to receive the Ted Aschman Memorial Prize for the best student report about planning ideas and programs. The award is presented annually by the American Society of Planning Officials, the largest national professional organization of urban planners.

The prize-winning paper, Capacity Building: An Alternative Approach to Citizen Involvement in Planning, was based on the students' experience in providing technical assistance to a citizens' committee seeking to guide the future development of Rockport, Mass., a small community on the North Shore 35 miles from Boston.

The paper was written by Jay W. Wollenberg of Delta, British Columbia; Frankiewicz; Julie A. Moir of Wilton, Conn.; James B. Gust of Minneapolis, Minn., and John B. Wilbur 3rd of Worthington, Ohio. They were assisted by Kay M. Anderson of Rockford, Ill., and Elizabeth R. Lund of Weston, Mass.

The winners divided their $1,000 prize. Each also received a letter of commendation from the Society praising the paper and noting that it was unusual to receive one written by so many people. Papers are evaluated without knowledge of the authors' identities.

Recalling the experience of writing the report, Wilbur said the students "learned a lot about how to work as a group and to share responsibilities. It was frustrating at times, but ultimately well worth it." Frankiewicz said the project "gave us more insight into our field work, plus a good opportunity to improve our writing abilities."

"Capacity building" is an experimental approach to community planning which encourages citizens to take on a greater role in their own local affairs. The concept was conceived and fostered by Professor Lawrence E. Susskind, assistant head of the Department of Urban Studies and Planning and supervisor of the Rockport project.

Symbolism seen in Passion flower

According to legend, early Roman Catholic missionaries gave the unique name, passionflower, to these blooming plants because the parts of the flower are said to represent Christ's crucifixion.

As the legend goes, the 10 yellow petals represent the 10 apostles present at the crucifixion, and inside the flower, light green-colored filaments, with a purple base, form a showy crown, thought to represent the crown of thorns. The five pollen-bearing anthers suggest Christ's wounds, and the division of the pistil represents the nails of the cross. The blade-like leaf is symbolic of the spear that pierced His side, and the coiling tendrils, on the underside of the flower, suggest whips and cords.

Information in the World Book Encyclopedia points out that passionflowers are native chiefly to the tropical and semitropical regions of North and South America, though a few species grow in Malaya, China, and Australia.

The familiar passionflower of the United States grows on a trailing or climbing woody vine and bears an edible yellow fruit, the maypop, which has a distinct, though slightly acid taste.

These blooms were photographed at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Hiram Weathersby, 407 Roberts St., Waveland.

A native of Tulsa, Mississippi, he attended school at Tulsa and at Central Baptist College in Conway, Arkansas. He pastored at Tupperware, Washington, and Tucson, Arizona, before accepting the position as pastor of the Bay View church here.

Rev. Lewis announced that tentative plans are to begin construction of a new church plant sometime this year if possible.

Let Go and Grow

Now is a good time to trigger a special personal development program for you.

Remember, right off that you are going to win and that you are programmed for success.

For example, when you wake, you are not programmed to sleep. Also, when you awaken, you do so 2000 times daily. Your internal system is designed to work.

Finally, think for a swift moment how many times your heart has beaten rhythmically the many years.

May, believing that your great system is meant to work, you have some principles selected for you from the field of human or personal development.

Know yourself as well as possible. You live with yourself 24 hours every day. Are you really aware of your strengths, success patterns, and habits? Study yourself. You're better, really, than you think you are.

Carry with you a notebook and use it daily. Capture ideas in your daily journal. Review your journal each day. Debate, interrelate, associate, and connect ideas. Thoughts, concepts which you've experienced, and are experiencing.

Ask yourself new questions daily. Here are some good ones: "Would I hire me?" "Can anyone do what I do any better?" "Would I like to sign all the work I do?" "Can I be a better person?" "How can I grow more and improve my overall lifestyle?" Questions are the creative acts of your intelligence. Check in your mind power.

Develop craftsmanship in your dreamland. Be a pro. Work hard. Do your home work. Remember these sage words: "It's not a matter of where you stand, but in what direction you're headed."

Read, study, broaden your interests. Reading will make a very full person. Good at Good out. Search for new and stimulating interest areas. Within your viewpoint, increase your understanding of people, places, things, behaviors, yours and others.

Develop creative avocations. Leaders have interesting "after hours" activities; like tinkering with antique cars, working with the underprivileged, teaching Sunday school, singing in the church choir.

Create around you a permissive and growthful atmosphere for family, friends, colleagues, and yourself. Set a creative climate where people and ideas grow. Encourage ideas, creativity, innovation.

Develop a sense of humor. Take more little breaks. Relax. Sharpen up your appreciation of humor. Remember: "Smile and the world smiles with you. Frown and you frown alone."

Specialize...daydream. Meditate. Red yourself of busy work, napping, get-there. Let your mind soar. You have the mind to imagine, and the skill to do so. To grow, let go.

Observe...associate. Predict. Open up your mind, let the universe in. Welcome ideas. Keep open the pathways to your good mind. Listen to innermost ideas. Look at everything like it's the first and the last time you'll ever see it. You'll see more beauty and wonderfulness than ever before. Try it.

Put these 10 tested principles of self-development to work for you now.

You'll be delighted with the positive results.

More Conservation. Less Conversation.

They say talk is cheap. Well, not if that's all that's being done about the gas shortage, it isn't!

One of the biggest problems is that the decision-makers outside of the gas-producing states are using up valuable time with endless, fruitless debate over how we got into this mess. And they are the ones who could help our industry start working on solutions.

So, instead of using our time, resources and energy in an all-out effort to find more natural gas to fuel homes and industries in the Gulf South area, we're watching things go from bad to worse as we strive for solutions without a national energy policy.

Wrong action and inaction on development of a constructive national energy policy are hurting all of us.

Too little supply? Or too much demand?

The answer is, both. For years, gas has been thought of as the "perfect" fuel. It requires no storage; it's odorless; it burns without pollution. And on top of all that, it's been available at prices far below the cost of alternate fuels such as oil and coal.

Because of the regulated low price, demand for natural gas has been simply overwhelming. Just about everybody who needs energy wants natural gas because of its superiority over other fuels. At the same time, the artificially low price imposed by the government on interstate gas inhibits exploration and tends to divert that gas which is discovered to intrastate use where gas sold at the wellhead brings a higher price.

Homes get top priority.

Priorities for the distribution of natural gas in interstate commerce are set by the Federal Power Commission, which is charged with the considerable task of trying to solve most of the needs for gas nationwide. In order to accomplish this fairly, the Commission has established priorities for natural gas usage, the number-one priority being for use in homes, schools, hospitals and commercial establishments.

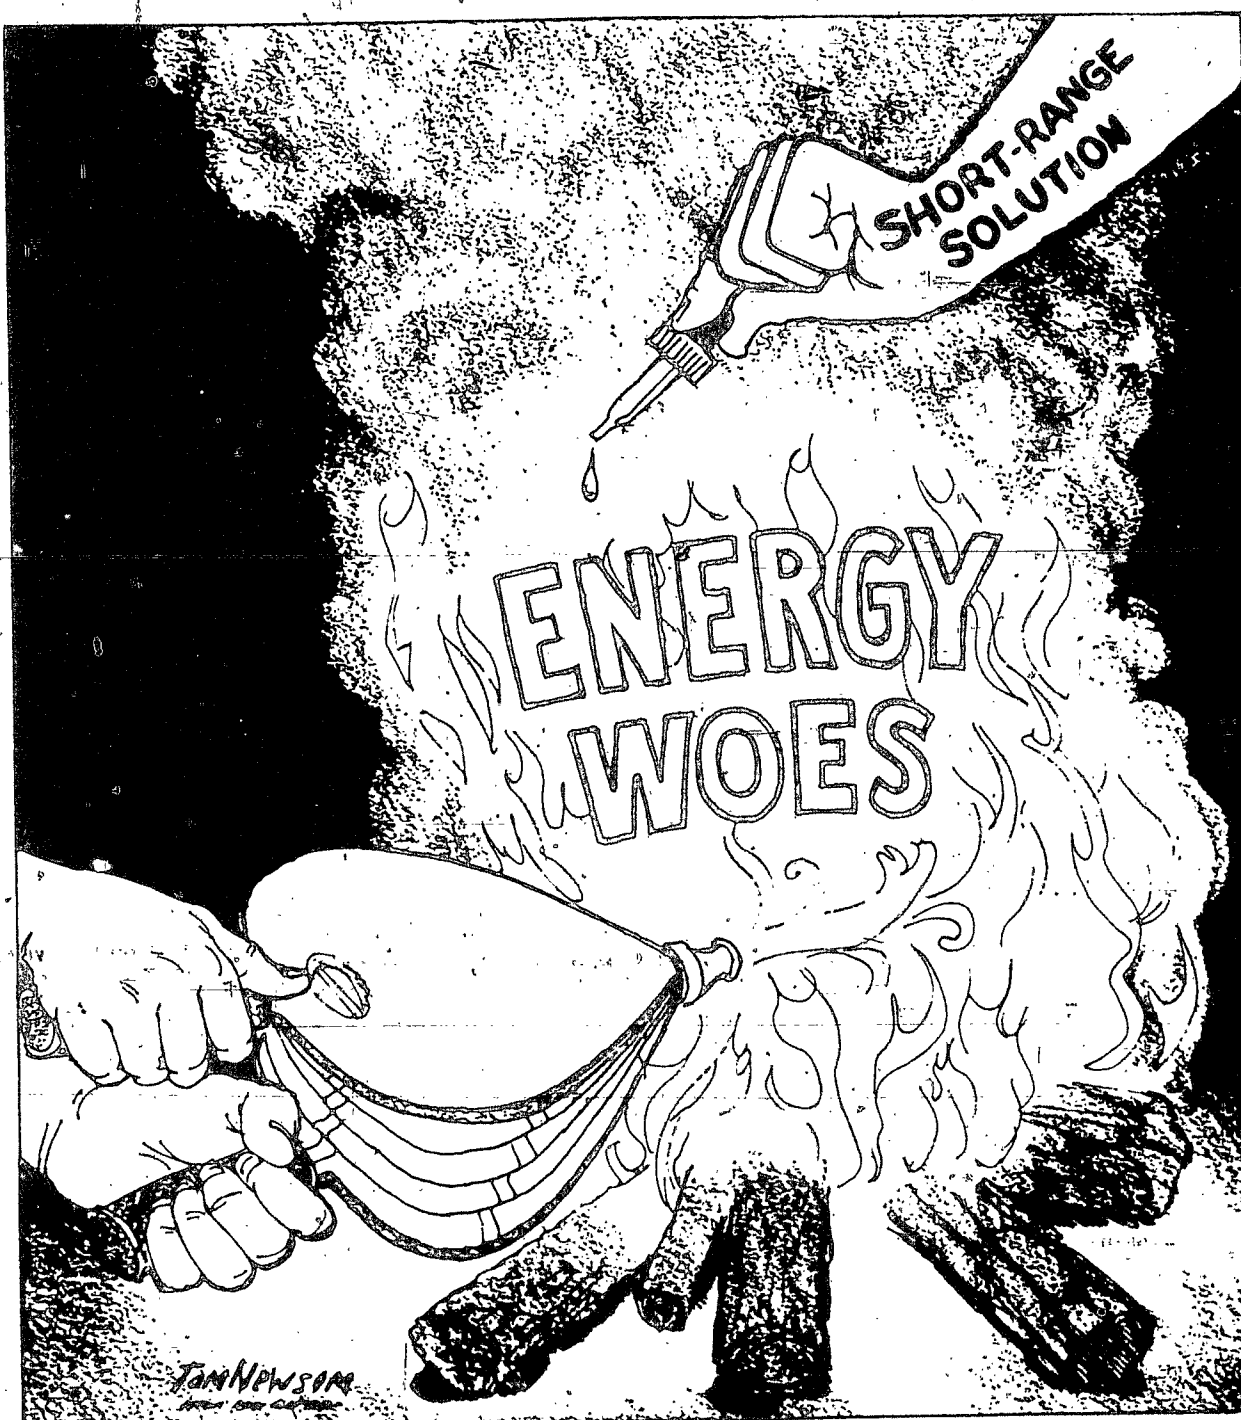

At the bottom of the FPC list are large industrial and power plant users who need gas to fuel boilers and generate electricity, because they can switch to alternate fuels. They're the first to feel the crunch, as they have this winter. Things could be even worse if some kind of accident or equipment failure disrupted the flow of gas from producing wells, or if there were an unexpected cold snap. And if conditions become particularly severe during the next few years, higher priority users could be affected as well.

The oil shortage doesn't help.

For years now, this nation has lived with seasonal curtailments of industrial gas supplies. But that fact went largely unnoticed, because the price of standby fuels—principally oil—while more than the price of natural gas, was not excessive.

Today, however, the cost differential is staggering. In equivalent terms, a "barrel" of natural gas at the wellhead will cost only a fraction of the price of a barrel of imported, non-regulated oil. Just $3, instead of $10 or $11.

And since one of the biggest uses of natural gas has been for the generation of electricity, the enormous increase in the cost of standby fuel which is being used as a replacement for natural gas is, indeed, a major problem for us all.

"Maybe we're going about this the wrong way."

The natural gas industry is caught in the middle. On one side, there's the increased demand for gas (magnified by a corresponding increase in the demand for electricity), and on the other side, there's a big increase in the price of the principal standby fuel—oil.

We're between the proverbial rock and a hard place.

We're all in the same boat.

To assure continuing service to homes and other high-priority gas users, United has had to curtail more gas supplies to industry this year than ever before.

Even so, during the recent colder-than-usual winter weather in the Gulf South, United was able to meet the gas demand of all "human needs" users and those industrial customers whose requirements do not exceed 1,500,000 cubic feet of gas per day. Industrial customers whose demands are greater have been affected by the curtailments.

But still, things haven't been as bad in the Gulf South as they could have been. Nor have they been as bad as they have in some other parts of the country. For example, although the Northeast has had a milder-than-usual winter, gas curtailments there have affected some of the higher priority gas users.

What can we do?

Just about anything that gets us moving toward solutions would help. We'd like to have more gas to sell. After all, we don't make money or friends by not selling gas.

The point is, United Gas is on your side. As a major supplier in this area, we're deeply and truly concerned with the needs of our customers in the Gulf South.

You're not saving gas, you're saving jobs.

Another big thing we all can do is cut down on the amount of natural gas we're now using.

We know. You're sick of people telling you to "conserve this" and "conserve that." Well, we're sorry. But it looks as if none of us has much choice. If we don't save gas at home, it could mean some temporary shut-downs in industry, putting people out of work. It could get worse in the years to come.

And nobody wants that.

So, even though it seems like a nuisance at worst, or no big deal at best, please turn your thermostat down to 68° during the day and 64° at night while you still need winter heating. Check to see that all your doors and windows are closed and sealed tightly. Also, consider adding some insulation to your house. And conserve every form of energy you use in your home.

Not only will you save money, but all together, we could save nearly 15 per cent of total home gas usage. Which would go a long way toward saving a lot of jobs for a lot of people.

Maybe even your own.

We're not the gas company. We're your gas company.

The Gulf South is our home. We've lived here, worked here and invested millions here over the past 40 years. What happens to you happens to us, for better or for worse. It's to our mutual advantage to work together to develop fair solutions to the national energy problem. We promise you we'll direct all our energies toward seeking solutions to help meet everyone's needs.

We're a lot more than just concerned bystanders. We live here, too.

What's United Gas doing?

Everything we possibly can. But it's getting more difficult all the time.

The problem is this: we have to compete with everyone else to get the gas that's available in this area. And as long as we're bound by artificially low wellhead prices for interstate supply, we can't pay as much as those who transport gas through intrastate lines.

Until something is done to relieve this situation, the best immediate source of additional gas for interstate sales appears to be in the Federal waters of the Gulf of Mexico.

But the cost of recovery is extremely high out there. Exploration companies can spend well over $100 million, just to acquire a tract and sink a well which might come up dry. When a well is developed, the pipeline companies have to compete with many others to acquire the reserves... and then build expensive pipeline networks to bring the gas to onshore customers.

Right now, United has over $300 million invested or committed in the Gulf, in advance payments to producers and on two major pipeline projects.

We're a 50-per-cent partner in Sea Robin Pipeline, which delivers up to 1.2 billion cubic feet of gas per day from offshore Louisiana. United and four other companies have applied to the FPC for permission to build High Island Offshore System (HIOS), which is expected to deliver up to 2 billion cubic feet of gas per day from offshore Texas. UT Offshore, an additional pipeline facility, will serve as the connecting link between the High Island System and United's onshore Louisiana facilities.

United also expects to gain substantial quantities of new gas as a result of recent agreements with a major exploration company, giving United first option on new reserves developed inside its service area and offshore in the Gulf of Mexico.

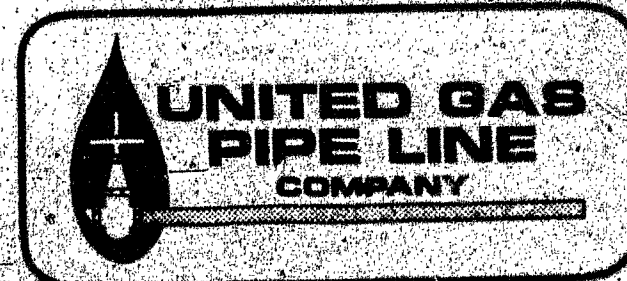

And even if we succeed in getting all that gas, we still face tremendous obstacles. It's getting more difficult every day to improve the Gulf South's gas supply situation in the face of seemingly endless discussions of the nation's energy shortage.

Actions speak louder than words.

There's been enough talk, enough delay. We can all sit around fixing the blame and talking it over, and it won't warm things up one degree around here. It's time we got on with finding solutions to our immediate and long-range problems.

To get started, we've prepared a brochure outlining what United is doing and how you can help. It's free. Just write: Straight Talk, United Gas Pipe Line Company, P. O. Box 1020, Jackson, Mississippi 39202.

There's a big job to be done: Conserve natural gas.

Casket girls of Biloxi

Among the many French people who were shipped to the new Mississippi Company in the early 1700's were a group of young French orphans called "The Casket Girls." They were called this because they arrived with little boxes, or "caskets," containing their wedding outfits. The first shipment arrived in Biloxi in January 1721, and all were quickly married. Other events in the early history of Mississippi are included in

"Provisional Period" air program in Mississippi ETV's new history series, "Mississippi: Time Was." The program will be broadcast at 7 p.m. Tuesday, April 6, and again Thursday, April 8 and Sunday, April 11, on the Mississippi ETV Network. For and full drawing by Mississippi ETV senior illustrator, designer, Clark Warner.

THE OLE PASTOR SAYS...

"My son, forget not my law; but let thine heart keep my commandments; for length of days, and long life, and peace, shall they add to thee" (Prov. 3:1-2).

Is church-going conducive to good health? Does an atmosphere of worship and Christian fellowship contribute to a longer life? Do church-goers live longer than non-churchgoers?

A study at Johns Hopkins University shows that the annual death rate for non-churchgoers is nearly double that of their neighbors who attend services regularly. Among non-attenders, the death rate is 900 per 100,000, while for church goers, the rate is only 500 per 100,000. This means that church goers on average are living longer. Is that what God's Word has been suggesting to us all along? Persons who take time for church have learned to manage their schedules. They function at a more relaxed pace. They refuse to drive themselves seven days a week. They also benefit from the inspiring music and from the Word that lifts them up, and gives to them confidence and hope.

But, of course, churchgoers don't attend church services on Sundays or at other times just so they'll live longer, BUT TO LIVE BETTER. There are some who live long lives, but live poorly. The good life has depth, height, breadth and length, because it is the Christian life.

"They that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength; they shall mount up like eagles; they shall run like deer; they shall bear fruit in season; they shall not fade; and they shall walk and not tire." — L. S. Walker

Consumer's Notebook

With Patricia Couch

Carrying your lunch to work or "brown bagging it," if you will - is a good way to save on your weekly food bill. But carelessly preparing "brown bag" lunches can also be a good way to get food poisoning.

If you've ever had severe headaches, diarrhea, vomiting, abdominal cramps or fever after eating, there's a strong possibility that you've experienced food poisoning. Because symptoms of the flu and food poisoning are similar, the two disorders are often mistaken for each other. Preparing a safe "brown bag" lunch is very simple. Keep all utensils and countertops scrupulously clean. They should be washed with soap and hot water after contact with raw food and before coming in contact with cooked food. Wash your hands the same way, and don't prepare food if you have open cuts or sores on your hands. Wear rubber or plastic gloves if you must cook under those circumstances.

Don't let your prospective lunch stand at room temperature for long periods of time. If you want to eat your lunch hot, store it in the traditional vacuum thermos bottle until lunch time. The best way to keep your lunch cold is to put it in an office refrigerator... if your office has one. If not, use a freezer gel device, or make one by cleaning out a plastic margarine tub, filling it with water and freezing it. Keep it in your lunchbag until you're ready to eat. You might also try freezing certain types of sandwiches. They will keep the rest of your food cool and thaw in time for lunch, though you will experience some loss of quality in the sandwich.

Canned meat and poultry products can be opened and eaten immediately at lunchtime. Lunchmeats make a nutritious nontime meal, but remember that luncheon meat should be used within one week of purchase. If kept longer, it may become contaminated.

Carry your lunch in an insulated lunch box. A lunch box will hold the cold in much better than paper bags and can be easily cleaned and sterilized. If you do carry your lunch in the traditional brown bag, buy bags specifically for that purpose and use them only once.

Heart attack workshops to be in Bay

The Mississippi Heart Association will hold two workshops in Cardio-Pulmonary-Resuscitation in Hancock County during the month of April.

Edward Freloux, coordinator for the project, announced that the six hour course, under the direction of Oz Ellis, will be given at Diamondhead Fire Station on April 7 and in Bay St. Louis at the Fire Station on April 13. Those participating will be certified as instructors under the latest standards set by the American Heart Association.

Social Security notes

Workers should apply promptly for payment

Working people who face a long-term severe disability should apply promptly for social security benefits to avoid loss of payments they may be entitled to, according to Charles E. Wofford, social security district manager in Gulfport.

Social security pays monthly benefits to eligible workers and their families if the worker is severely disabled and cannot work for a year or more. Payment begins with the 6th full month of disability, but it isn't necessary to wait that long to apply.

"Back payments can only be made for up to 12 months," Wofford said. "So disabled workers shouldn't delay their application, even if they're not sure they'll qualify for payments. About one of every 12 workers getting social security disability payments misses out on some payments because he applied too late."

Disabled workers who haven't applied for benefits should call any social security office, as soon as possible, according to Wofford. "Or, they can ask a friend or relative to make the call," he said.

Social security disability benefits are paid to over 2.3 million disabled workers and over 1.7 million dependents.

The average payment is $224 a month. Disabled people who have been entitled to social security disability benefits for 24 consecutive months or more are eligible for Medicare health insurance.

The Social Security Administration is an agency of the U.S. Department of Health, Education, and Welfare. The Gulfport social security office is at 02015 Pass Road. The phone number is 896-1323.

Beef cattle and forage to be Field Day topics

Beef cattle producers that are interested in the latest information on animal and forage management should plan to attend the "Beef Cattle and Forage Field Day" being held Monday, March 29, at the South Mississippi Research and Extension Center, Poplarville.

Registration will begin at 8:30 a.m. The program will begin at 9:15 a.m. and adjourn at 3 p.m. The morning session will feature a special producers panel "Grain on Grass" with a discussion of personal feeding experiences by Jerry Lyon, Pine Burr Ranch and Malcom Broome, Beaver Creek Ranch. Dr. Roy Burris will cover his research results with "Grain on Grass" in his discussion on "Backgrounding and Finishing Research." Dr. Burris will also detail the results of the feedlot-finishing research utilizing corn silage. Dr. Werner Essig will cover latest research on "Hay Packaging Systems" and the most efficient methods to get maximum utilization regardless of the system used.

A Dutch lunch will be available at the Pearl River Junior College Cafeteria. The afternoon program will be a bus tour of the research on the White Sand and McNeill Experiment Station Units. Tour stops will cover "Wintergrazing and Cow-Calf Projects" and "Forage Finishing Systems" at the White Sand Unit. The "Feedlot, Crossbreeding and Silage Research" will be studied at the McNeill Unit. The tour will allow those in attendance to get a full picture of the beef cattle and forage research programs at this Experiment Station and will add to the usefulness of the information presented in the morning discussions. An information packet with research results and Extension recommendations will be distributed to those in attendance.

Mark your calendar for Monday, March 29, to attend the "Beef Cattle and Forage Field Day" in Poplarville at the Moody Hall Auditorium, Pearl River Junior College Campus and bring your neighbor.

STRETCH FERTILIZER DOLLARS

Every dollar that you can cut from your crop production costs may mean more profit to your following harvest.

One way to cut costs is to make the fertilizer you buy do the most good. Here are some suggestions:

Soil test to see where phosphate and potash are most needed. Many soils are high in phosphorus and potash, especially where high rates of fertilizer have been used for several years.

Apply nitrogen as near to the time of use as possible.

What would you do with 2000 lbs. of trash?

It's hard to believe that each of us produces 2,000 lbs. of trash a year, but it's true. Unfortunately, too much of this solid waste ends up on our highways, city streets, and many other places where it's not wanted.

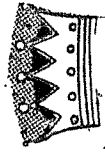

Solid waste disposal is everyone's problem. Not only does it waste tax dollars, it's an eyesore. It doesn't have to be this way. If we work together to clean up what we messed up, we can have one of the most attractive states in the country.

But one individual, or group of individuals can't do it alone. It's going to take all of us working collectively to get the job done. There's a Clean Up Mississippi Committee in your county that needs your help, right now.

Phone call was from Dr. Pepper, and wife Poppy, who told Echoes City Desk to "watch it." The crazy doctor is like that. LaFrance handled him well and hung up the phone. We haven't been back since.

Lisa F. Shattuck of Waveland is featured artist in this week's Sunday Echoes. Though talented and possessing a wide range of interests, Lisa announced she wanted no part of our intended Rock Roll and Joust. We explained opportunity existed for entry of the "Weight of Waveland," normally employed for paper holding down, but her answer was wrapped up in some obscure Mexican phrases. We think she meant, "forget it."

the word I want to be is

I just want to be me I just want to be me I just want to be me

Lisa - a girl in love with life

Lisa Francis Shattuck, seven, is in the second grade at Waveland Elementary School.

Described by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Shattuck of 206 Arlington Street, as being "academically inclined," Lisa moves right along in several areas of endeavor. Possessing an exceptional memory for a girl of her age, she is able to clearly relate items of her "earlier childhood," with vivid descriptions and a great accuracy of fact.

Liking school, she expresses a flair for reading, mathematics, and writing, and also favors math games as a learning method. Her school playground activities include basketball practice and jump rope workouts.

Lisa genuinely enjoys life and lives with verve.

Making clothes for dolls, she also embroiders her own shirts and blouses. Around the house she helps wash dishes, clean-up, and stacks the dirty clothes into the washing machine. "Mummy puts the soap into the washer," she reported, of probably a wise restraint.

Cleaning up her room, she indicates a fondness for vacuum, cleaner type chores over bed making, an operation not too suited for her diminutive stature.

Having one sister, Johanna, five, Lisa proudly announces graduation to a two-wheeler, albeit with training wheels, and in contrast, her voluntary service of painting walls in a new addition to the family's home.

Lisa says she likes playing games at home. Her favorites include one involving the removal of "cherries" from a tree, a move defeated if she spins the wheel, moves her token, and lands on a bird - when all the "cherries" have to be replaced. Her second best is an actively involving the placement of old newspapers on a board without touching the sides. Tweezers and skill are needed for successful completion of this exercise.

Photos by Neville R. Jacob

Lisa works pointer in explaining geographic location of local points of interest.

Of her "past memories" Lisa best recalls her time spent in Mexico where the family lived while her father attended the university.

"We went to caves with Indian writing on the walls in red and yellow. We visited pyramids (her father studied anthropology) and once when we were climbing a mountain we all got dizzy and had to come back down," she said.

Talking of the monkeys on which they rode, "...because they didn't have any horses," she allowed they didn't have any slow but, "...sort of fun."

Liking books, Lisa read from her social studies text and explained the connection between the words and music in her singing class songbook. She also has one other talent, we later learned from her mother, Lisa is very interested in dancing and enjoys lessons in both tap and ballet.

About as tall and heavy as a stack of pennies, Lisa Francis Shattuck, as tiny as she is, sounds as though she has got it all together.

There are many who would envy this final attribute. (-5)

Lisa portrays "teacher."

A VERY SCARY NIGHT

Late one night when the moon was bright, I heard a sound that I never heard to this day. I opened the door and look out of sight. Nothing I saw but a moon full of light. What could it be, it was scary to me. I look at the roof and I look at the wall, and I look at floor and nothing I see. I just have to remember not to be scared on a very scary night.

ONE SPRING DAY

One Spring Day I went out to play. It was a nice day. The sun was up. And I had fun. I was shooting with my gun. I was a play day. I call my Sister Out to play. She said Oh! what a very nice day! And we sang All Day! the end

Dear (loosely speaking) Sirs,

Your recent mail is, to say the very least, lart. It is indeed lucky for us that prior to working on the rockpile of Diamondhead, Dr. Pepper (who you think is your pet rock) - but not his adorable wife Peppy - was engaged by this firm as a doctstop.

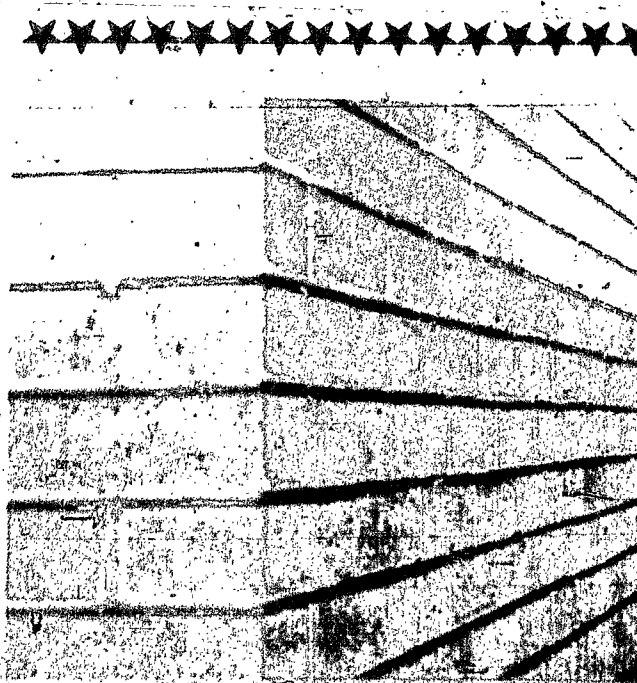

Just for your information, Pepper let us of his own accord, and with, our blessings. He at that time was leaving for polishing school - a destination never reached due to an unfortunate chance encounter with a cement mixer. Spinning out smartly at the first opportunity, Pepper for once lay quiet and was cast into the rockpile. Your rescue was opportune and undoubtedly saved him from further crushing. His loyalties however, plus a few items in our files, remain with the firm of D.C. & H.

Pepper has informed us that you are not too happy with our services, due primarily to our failure to so far file "D" for Documents in the impending case of Sunday Echoes vs. Gertrude, Charter Member (CM) of the National Organization for Liberation of Fenable
